

RAIL STRIKE DECLARED OFF BY LABOR CHIEFS: LAY ACTION TO GOVERNMENTAL PRESSURE

Appeal for National Unity Made by President

PRESIDENT MAKES FINE IMPRESSION UPON ATLANTANS

Urges People of Georgia and South to Aid Him in Bringing About a National Understanding.

BIG CROWD PRESENT AT GRADY MONUMENT

Thousands Rush to Speakers' Stand in Effort to Shake Hand of Leader of United States.

Warren Gamaliel Harding, president of the United States, cast from him the cloak of eminence with which his office enfolded him, and yesterday in Atlanta with a shirt-sleeved simplicity pleaded with the people of Atlanta, of Georgia, and of the south to aid him in his work of bringing about a national understanding that would dispel the clouds that now hover over the country.

He made his appeal in a voice, so charged with emotion, so expressive of his realization of the magnitude of the task that is before his administration, so fraught with the knowledge of single-handed importance in the crisis that he was transformed from a frock coated, beaming personage, occupying the world's highest place, to a simple, high-minded and very gallant gentleman, who is fighting the good fight against odds that seem insuperable.

It was a striking fact that the president made this appeal for national unity, while standing directly beneath the bronze replica of the great Georgian, who was its apostle, and Mr. Harding paid glowing tribute to the heart and brain of Georgia's gifted son as he asked his people to carry on his work.

Swept by Appeal.

And the throng that heard his appeal was swept by a wave of sentiment for the man making the fight, and a spirit of patriotic impulse to help him in his struggle.

All through the day the president shared the plaudits of the people with Mrs. Harding, Secretary of War Weeks and Secretary of the Interior Fall. The first lady of the land was the especial guest of the women of Atlanta and did not join the general celebration until the afternoon parade.

During the two speeches of the president and from the minute of his arrival until his train steamed out for Washington, Atlanta outdid itself in welcoming President Harding as the nation's chief executive and as a statesman in whom it has unbounded confidence and for whom it has the profoundest good will.

The last census gives Atlanta a little better than 202,000 population, but easily a quarter of a million people saw the president in Georgia.

CHARLES AND ZITA TO GO ON WARBOAT PENDING DECISION

Paris, October 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—The allied council of ambassadors today decided that former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary and ex-Empress Zita should be placed immediately upon a British battle cruiser in the Danube, pending another meeting of the council next Saturday when a final decision regarding their disposition is to be made.

The ambassadors were unable to reach a final decision today because they were faced with the insinuation of various countries to furnish asylum for the ex-monarchs. It was said their final disposition was proving to be an awkward problem.

ARKWRIGHT URGES MERCHANTS TO AID PUBLIC UTILITIES

Asserts They Should Create Sentiment Which Will Allow Preparation for New Industries.

DECLARES RAIL BOARD INFLUENCED BY PUBLIC

Absolutely Essential That Utilities Be Allowed to Expand to Meet Growing Demands, He Claims.

Retail merchants of Atlanta were challenged last night by Preston Arkwright, president of the Georgia Railway and Power company, to take an active stand in creating proper public sentiment so that utilities may expand to meet the growth of the community and be prepared to serve new industries.

Speaking before the regular meeting of the Atlanta Retail Merchants, at the Kimball house, Mr. Arkwright declared that, naturally, the railroad commission is influenced by public sentiment; that only the present customers of utilities attend hearings as public representatives, that they are interested only in whether they shall have to pay a few cents more for service, and that somebody ought to be present at every hearing "to represent the future for people who would come here if assured they would be served."

"He declared, in effect, that unless public utilities expand, the city cannot grow; that the present public influence on the railroad commission is bound to hamper expansion and that it is vitally essential that proper public sentiment be created so that the industry can expand and meet the growing demands."

Regulated by Law.

He also called attention of the merchants to the fact that the prices charged by utilities are regulated and profits limited by law, whereas the merchants themselves are permitted to make quick turnovers.

Unusual interest also centered in the address of Clarence Haverly, vice president of the Haverly Furniture company, who spoke on "Why I Am a Member of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association."

Mr. Haverly spoke of the progressive work of the association and the great benefits resulting from its work. He spoke with pride of Georgia merchants and Atlanta merchants and drew a round of applause and created considerable speculation as to whether he referred to the present city administration when he asserted that "we

Judges to Pick Winners Tonight In Photo Contest

Announcement of Results
Will Be Made in The Constitution Sunday.

Three picked judges will meet tonight to decide on the winners in the $1,000 prize photograph contest which The Constitution inaugurated a month ago. The successful contestants will be announced in Sunday's issue.

The judges are C. P. Bidwell, president of the Atlanta Art association and an official of the Music Festival association; J. L. Hoffmann, well-known landscape artist, and Walton Reeves, prominent photographer.

A more difficult task was never set before any judges, for the avalanche of photographs which The Constitution received during the contest from every section of the south contains many pictures of unusual merit and to reach a decision the discriminating faculties of the judges will be taxed to the limit.

It was because of the large number received and the high merits evinced that the choice of the winners has not been made before. The contest closed on October 15, but nevertheless a detail has been hard at work in an endeavor to mark, classify and appropriately place the photographs for the view of the judges.

GEORGE'S POLICY IN TEST MONDAY

House of Commons to Devote Session to Discussion of Irish Phase of British Politics.

BY RALPH H. TURNER.
United News Staff Correspondent.
London, October 27.—The parliamentary test of Lloyd-George's policy towards Ireland will come next Monday in the house of commons, when the premier will devote the entire session to answering the attack of his political enemies on this one phase of British politics.

The discussion, which is expected to be bitter, will center around a resolution to be introduced by the opposition.

Complete Text Of Harding's Speech

The full text of President Harding's address here follows:

"Fellow Americans: I can not tell you how glad I am to be here, to greet you men and women of Atlanta, of Georgia, and the south, and to receive this testimony of devotion to our common country. Be assured that, much as I crave, and wish to deserve, your good will, I shall not mistakenly assume that you are here to greet me, or ever could be for any one man. I recognize it as the tribute which a great people pays to a constituted authority in its public life. It is the reflection of the spirit which makes our popularly governed institutions secure. But you will permit me to say, from my heart, that nowhere else, do they do these things with quite the same zest and flavor and convincing enthusiasm which spice the hospitality of your wonderful south. As private citizen or public official."

COCA-COLA ORDERS DOLLAR DIVIDEND ON COMMON STOCK

Meeting of Directors Held in New York—Action Is Taken With Stock at High Record.

A quarterly dividend of one dollar per share on common stock, payable December 1, was declared by the Coca-Cola company at a meeting of directors in New York Thursday afternoon, according to dispatches received here last night.

This is the first dividend paid on this issue of stock since July of 1920, and the action is said to have been based on an excellent report of increased earnings.

The stock rose to a new high record for the year yesterday, when it reached 33 1/2 during the forenoon session. This was 1 1/2 points higher than Wednesday's close, and compares with 40 1/2, the 1920 high record. During the period of depression, the stock sold down to 18 in 1920 and as low as 20 during the early part of this year.

Many Rumors.

For the past week rumors to the effect that a dividend would be declared on the common stock have been circulated. Officials of the company refused to affirm these reports, and stated they could not anticipate the action of the directors.

The dividend on the common was at the rate of $4 a share annually.

WASTE AND LOBBY CHARGED TO STATE FARM DEPARTMENT

Creation of Political Machine Charged by Grover Edmondson in Article in Watson's Paper.

'EDMONDSON IGNORANT' REPLY OF J. J. BROWN

'Blood-Sucking Branches' of Department Scored by Sentinel Editorial—Hardwick Not Mentioned.

Specific charges of waste of public money; wholesale and systematic lobbying in both branches of the legislature; creation of a political machine which led the federal government to "a severance of relations" with the state bureau of markets and operation of a general "salary grab" department with the $250,000 annual appropriation, are made in an article written by Grover C. Edmondson, appearing in this week's issue of Senator Thomas E. Watson's paper, The Columbia Sentinel.

This is the second explosion of a political nature occurring during the week, the first being when the same newspaper in its last issue printed a strong attack by Senator Watson on the Hardwick administration. No mention of the governor was made in the issue.

J. J. Brown, commissioner of agriculture, when asked about the Edmondson charges Thursday, said he did not have any comment to make at this time.

"Ignorant," Says Brown.

"The only thing I have to say is that the article itself shows that Mr. Edmondson is totally ignorant of Georgia affairs," Mr. Brown said.

In his article, Mr. Edmondson points out that Georgia Tech was "unoverhauled" and could get no relief from the state administration, while at the same time the legislature was appropriating $350,000 to pay the expenses of "a traveling department of agriculture" and its "blood-sucking branches."

Lists of the officers employed in the state bureau of entomology, a branch of the department of agriculture, and of total appropriations made to the department during the year are printed in the article.

"Somebody is riding for a hard fall next year," Mr. Edmondson predicts.

Article in Fall.

The article is carried in the usual section of the Columbia Sentinel, which Mr. Edmondson, who is Senator Watson's secretary, uses each week. Following is the article in full.

VOTE IS CLOSE TO STAY AT JOBS, DECLARE LEADERS

"Growing Public Opinion" That Unions Would Buck Labor Board in Strike Is Blamed.

W. G. LEE ANNOUNCES DECISION OF UNIONS

Code Messages Revoking
Walkout Order to Go
Out Today to General
Chairmen.

Chicago, October 27.—(By the Associated Press.)—The rail strike, scheduled for October 30, was averted tonight when leaders of the switchmen, trainmen conductors, engineers, and firemen at a joint meeting adopted resolution withdrawing authorization of a walkout, and officials of the railroad telegraphers' organization announced they would take similar action. These were the only unions which had authorized a strike.

The vote calling off the strike was unanimous by organizations. W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, announced. The official wording of the resolution adopted was that "the strike be declared not effective."

The vote in the individual unions was unusually close, however, the firemen particularly holding lengthy arguments before agreeing to cancellation of the strike order, the labor chiefs said. In some of the groups the ballot was described as "the closest in history on a similar question. All of the differences were ironed out by the different unions, however, and the final showdown found all of them casting their ballots for 'no strike.'"

DUE TO PRESSURE
BY GOVERNMENT.

L. E. Sheppard, president of the Order of Railroad Conductors, said that the unions had decided to call off the strike because of "the growing public opinion that the strike would be against the labor board, and consequently the government and not against the railroads."

"It was evident also that the entire Washington administration was opposed to us, and that we have had little chance of gaining our objectives," said Mr. Sheppard.

"We called this strike to gain certain rights to which our men were entitled," Mr. Sheppard told the Associated Press.

"It soon became evident, however, that the roads were succeeding in their misleading propaganda to the effect that we really would be striking against the government. NO OTHER COURSE OPEN, SAYS OFFICER.

"This railroad propaganda found its way to the United States railroad labor board. This government agency told us that it would look on a strike as against it and the government, and not against the roads, and that the full force of the government would be brought to bear against us if we walked out. Under such circumstances there was

Atlanta, the eternal vision of the brighter side that is so natural to you people of the land of sunshine. One who comes to your metropolis of today can not but realize how useless to attempt, with fire and sword, to discourage such a people as this, to extinguish their enthusiasm, to daunt their matchless courage, to daunt their matchless courage. What chance is there to keep down a people who, when you burn their house, rear in its place a palace of marble; and when amid the passions of war you drive them in thousands from their home, return in tens of thousands to build it into a metropolis? The reason why the south recovered so soon from the war was that it was made up of just that sort of people. But I ought to say, because I speak as a son of a veteran of that conflict, that the north had no desire to destroy. It was merely the combat for understanding, cruel though it was, and a battle to preserve the great Ark of the Covenant, in which preservation we commonly rejoice today.

It has seemed to me, many times in the period since the world ended, that the world at large might well let us show it the marvel which was wrought through the united and restored America. Because there was the will to get down to work, to cease repining and regret, out of the wreckage that our war wrought, a country in which we may fitly take the pride which every American feels.

Rescue of Humanity.
"Who would have ours less than the great, rich, progressive, powerful, and enlightened America? Who would have ours less than the world that it has been in these years of crisis and disaster? What friend of civilization, of Christianity, of human advancement, would have wished our part less than it has been. Who among us all is not proud that we were able to participate in the struggle which menaced its very existence? Who would have us relinquish now our service for a better civilization?"

"Surely, we will go on, developing the nationality that has given us faith and weight and power for the tasks of the past, knowing there are other tasks in the future which will demand the utmost we can contribute to them. We have learned, along with the rest, that mankind must go forward or backward as a whole. It is not to be expected that some sectors shall advance as others retire. Either the race will advance or it will retrograde; it will not stand still."

Franches Peace.
"I believe, for instance, that every family which has lost a member in the struggle to save mankind from absolutism; every citizen-soldier who has given years and sufferings to that cause; every gold-star mother or maimed veteran, will agree that peace is preferable to war, and that to train a world in the ways of peace is better than to prepare it for war. I would not have you misconstrue. I believe it wholly consistent to preach peace and its triumphs in that convincing sincerity which an unflinching nation commands and yet make sure about our proper defense."

"Manifestly, mankind is disposed to try that experiment. If, trying it, nations shall fail, it will be no fault of the United States of America. We are ready to offer a helping hand in the new path. We have learned the lesson, on both the national and world scale. We fought our war of sections and systems, and decided forever in favor of peace and unity. Our own experience has taught us that we may hope that a like decision will be reached by a wide reasoning amid the convictions which follow in the wake of a tragedy supreme.

National Independence.
"It should not be needful for me to repeat that, in whatever contribution we can make to the establishment of a better order, we shall not surrender any of our national independence. America will be for America first; but it will never be a merely selfish America, imagining the wide perceptions which mankind needs to cheer and speed it on the way to the brighter and better realm of peace restored and effectively assured, of progress resumed, and righteous aspirations impelling ever greater achievements and ever higher attainments."

APPEAL FOR NATIONAL UNITY MADE HERE

gia's capital Thursday. The streets at the Grady monument that the president could be heard by only the few who were right at the stand. Some sections of the crowd became rather unruly with enthusiasm. There was indiscriminate cheering, so prolonged, that there was difficulty in getting the speaking under way.

There were efforts to restore order by Governor Hardwick, Congressman W. D. Upham descended from the platform on his crutches to plead for dignified attention to the proceedings, but it was not until they were jammed at the hour of his scheduled arrival from his trip of inspection to Camp Benning. They overflew as he rode in parade to the Grady monument for his only set speech of the day. And while he spoke every inch of ground within anything like hearing distance, was humanly occupied, while the windows of every building in the neighborhood were filled with Atlantans eager to catch a word or glimpse of the distinguished visitor.

Was Hard to Hear.
So great was the press of people the president arose and urged quiet that it was anything like restored. Everyone of the thousands banded about the streets struggled toward the president to shake his hand or yell their fealty.

Makes Profound Impression.
This wealth of welcome typical of that given the president on his tour through the south made a profound impression on the Hardwick heart. When he spoke at Druid Hills Golf club he voiced this appreciation. "Let me express my appreciation of the typical southern hospitality that has been lavished on us since we entered your section," said the president. "Everywhere there have been smiling faces, clapping hands and cordial greetings. It has been sweeter than I can tell you."

It was while he rode slowly through the masses of people that on his side entered your section, manifested. He is a rather grave looking man and a bit drawn as he descended from his car at the Terminal station. But as he drove through the people and cheer mounted on cheer and shout was multiplied by shout, the breadth of his smile grew, his face became a radiant red. He was a schoolboy receiving plaudits and praises and he was blushing withal and enjoying the blushes.

Mrs. Harding, seated in the car with her distinguished husband and Forrest Adair, was carried away by the enthusiasm of the throng. Her face was radiant with excitement and pleasure. She bowed to individuals. It was easy to see that the land's first lady was thrilled by the homage and loyalty paid the man by her side.

Chill Mist Falling.
Had it not been for the weather the day would have passed off perfectly. As it was a chill mist began falling just an hour before the president was scheduled to arrive, and the day remained cloudy, overcast and chilly, until the hour of the parade when the sun peeped out graciously and contributed its splendor briefly to the brilliance of the sight.

There was but the slightest reference to the president's speech in Birmingham Wednesday in which he declared that there could never be social equality between the races, but there must be a political and business separation. The nation could achieve real democracy. This reference was made by Secretary of the Interior Fall during his talk at the luncheon at Druid Hills.

Arrives Ahead of Time.
The president and his party were not scheduled to reach Atlanta until 1:30 o'clock, but it was a few seconds past 1:20 p. m. when his train pulled into the Terminal station. The train was not decorated and could not have been recognized as a presidential vehicle had it not been for the presence of a gentleman in a top hat and formal afternoon coat on the observation platform, and Joe Billups, the general passenger agent of the W. F. road, who had brought the party through safely, smiling his gratification from the steps of one of the forward cars.

All the reception committee was on hand, however. It was noteworthy that in receiving the president political animosities were forgotten. Former Senator Hoke Smith was down at the station early, towering over all the rest of the committee. There were Melvin Wilkinson, president of the President's club, and Walker Lee, secretary and alter ego of Mayor Key, who isn't supposed to fraternize with the President's club at all. There was Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, chatting as pleasantly as you'd like with Clark Howell, democratic national committeeman between whom there have been political differences.

As the train came to a halt, there was a brief wait as the Atlanta dignitaries went aboard the car to greet the president. It was noteworthy that the gentlemen of the delegation were dressed entirely in formal, violating the ancient precedent in the south of receiving a president in frock coats and high hats.

President Is Cheered.
Senator Smith went aboard, followed by Governor Hardwick, Secretary Lee, Mr. Howell, Lee Ashcraft, president of the chamber of commerce; Forrest Adair, chairman of the committee, was the first to descend from the car and he was followed by the president, who was lustily cheered.

After the gentlemen had started making their way up the Terminal station steps, Mrs. Harding alighted. She was accompanied by a committee of ladies, headed by Mrs. Albert Thornton, president of the City Federation of Clubs. Another cheer greeted her.

The plaza in front of the Terminal station was jammed and a cheer went up as soon as the president appeared. He was closely flanked by secret service men, and Chief Beavers and Chief of Detectives Lamar Poole.

The rain was falling with an low discomfort as the president bowed his acknowledgments to the cheering crowd. "Put on your hat, Mr. President," yelled a wag, who was seated on the roof of the station. "You'll catch cold."

President Makes Retort.
"I'd ruin the hat, though," answered the president, in smiling banter, and there was a roar of laughter. He was immediately ushered to his car, but had to pause for photographs. The presidential automobile was driven by Jesse County, manager of the Georgian Terrace hotel. It was occupied only by the president, Forrest Adair and a secret service man.

The other cars came in the following order:
No. 3—Secretary Weeks, Secretary Christian, Lee Ashcraft, Judson Weliver, Colonel Sheppell.
No. 3—Governor Hardwick, Commander Holmes, Mrs. Hardwick, Mrs. Thornton, Mrs. Ashcraft.
No. 4—Secretary Fall, Senator Underwood, Hoke Smith, General Sawyer, Melvin Wilkinson, Walker Lee.
No. 5—Mrs. Underwood, Mrs. Key, Mrs. Lumpkin, marine.

Party Is Cheered.
The party was vigorously cheered all the way out to the Druid Hills club, where the president was to be entertained. At formal luncheon. Even after the city had been passed the roads were lined with people, largely in motor cars.

At the motor entrance to the club a little girl was in waiting with a bouquet of red, white and blue ribbons, and it was noticed that the president carried a bouquet as he entered the clubhouse.

The ballroom of the club was elaborately decorated in national colors, and places had been set for 250 guests. The impressive looking Sengemarian retaining the right of inheritance, or something, to open the carriage door of every car in the porte cochere to bow the president into the house.

Mr. Harding checked his hat and overcoat with the rest of the guests, and before entering the dining room was introduced to many Atlantans and chatted informally.

It was then that Atlantans could realize just how closely the president can get to the hearts of Americans. He is absolutely without aloofness and by the same token he is absolutely without the studied half fellow-well-meetness of the professional politician.

Appreciates Welcome.
In his conversation he gratefully referred to his gratitude over the warm welcome he had received in the south, and never touched on any subject of a political nature. As he entered the ball room he was greeted by mass cheers and then everybody present, including the president, fell to work on the luncheon, an excellent one by the way.

Food having been disposed of, Mr. Adair, speaking briefly, referred to the pleasures felt by Atlanta in being able to show its respect and affection for the president of the United States. "Since I have known anything of Atlanta," said Mr. Adair, "the city has entertained every president of the nation with the exception of the last one, who started out here but who never came back." He then presented Mr. Lee, the official representative of the mayor.

During his welcome remarks, Mr. Lee said, "I well remember a conversation with you, Mr. President, before you were president, in which you declared that you cherished the ambition to do some signal service to the south. Mr. President, we believe in you. You have already served us well and we are depending on you to be our leader through the difficulties that now beset our section and our nation." Mr. Lee was enthusiastically applauded.

Refers to Rift.
In introducing Governor Hardwick, Mr. Adair referred to his rift with the relations with the junior senator from Georgia. "Our governor is a queer man," said Mr. Adair. "He has more ups and downs than an elevator boy. He stands well with a certain powerful Georgia gentleman one day, but I wake up today to find that he has been disinherited, but up to date, I'm with him."

"The people of Georgia may be high-strung," said Governor Hardwick, "but they are the most independent people on the face of the earth. They may differ from people of other sections on party politics or political personalities, but when the broad principles of Americanism are involved, there are no people who render a more intense and unquestioning loyalty than the people of this state."

Ready to Pay Homage.
"They may differ from our guest on some matters of party principle, but they are ready to pay homage to the splendid, sterling qualities that I know he possesses. I have sat beside him in the United States senate, and I have never seen him flicker in his high patriotism. I have never seen him prompted by any desire other than to serve the best interests of his country as a whole, and I predict that when he goes out of office, he will have accomplished that task toward which he has set his heart and that a complete and perfect reunion of this country will be an enduring fact. His head and heart are big enough for the work."

Mr. Adair then presented Secretary Weeks, who took occasion to pay glowing tribute to Governor Hardwick. "I am glad to be in the most enterprising city of the south," said the secretary of war. "I know I'm in the south's most enterprising city because I've been told so several times since my arrival."

"It is with a great deal of pleasure that I have met here two of my old associates in the United States senate, former Senator Smith and Governor Hardwick. We didn't always agree in the senate and when we didn't agree they were wrong. But right here I want to say a word to you about Tom Hardwick. Your governor has the one essential quality of a statesman more highly developed than any man I have ever known in public life. And that is courage. He has the courage of the damned. He has courage whether he is right or whether he is wrong, and I'd rather have a man who is wrong half the time, who has the courage to fight when he is right than a man

Praise for Harding.
"We have tremendous problems before this administration, no one knows just how tremendous they are. Right now I am at the head of the greatest junk shop in the world and most of it ought to be scrapped. I've just come from Camp Benning and it's one of the things under my jurisdiction that ought not to be scrapped and still when I was in the senate I voted against its establishment.

"We have problems that are infinitely greater than any little local matter, and I want to assure you gentlemen that we are working night and day and giving you our very best efforts to solve them."

Secretary Fall Speaks.
Secretary Fall was then introduced. "When Tom Harding and I got out of the senate," he said, "I quit making speeches, but I see that Tom isn't cured. But it is a delight for me to talk to you, because I am of the south. I was born in your neighborhood, near Tennessee and my father rode with Forrest. When I moved to the southwest, I was a territorial judge by Grover Cleveland and I've never been ashamed of the fact that I was a Grover Cleveland democrat, and I've told Tom Harding that."

"I was delighted when President Harding invited me to make this trip with him for I wanted to know people of the south to know him and know his great heart, and when he finishes this term and his second term, if God spares him that long, you're going to believe in my estimate of him. He is a man of the type of Grover Cleveland and I'm proud to serve him in any capacity."

Secretary Fall was greeted by a remarkable demonstration, as he closed.

President's Remarks.
Mr. Adair presented the president, simply voicing a sentiment which President Harding arose to speak the throne rose with him and applauded and cheered for a full two minutes. When the chief executive had spoken of his gratification over the reception, he said, "this expression of your good feeling is a peculiar satisfaction to me who feel the necessity for a oneness of purpose in this republic."

"Twenty-three years ago, I passed through Atlanta, just a few days after the Maine was destroyed in Havana harbor. I was looking in a shop window in which was a military display. An old Johnny Reb was talking to an old Yankee and I heard him say 'when we got the United States united, all hell can't lick us.' I wouldn't express it just that way, but his sentiment is mine. I believe that this nation is so righteous in spirit and so unselfish in purpose that our force of example and power of influence in this republic will eventually guide the world."

"We must first understand each other and then we want the world to understand us and when that understanding is completed, peace will reign."

Secretary Weeks and Secretary Fall have talked of serving me.
"They do not serve me. They serve you, just as I serve you or would like to serve you, with a full devotion and unflinching purpose. I want you to believe in me because I have your help. We are all Americans and we Americans must fight out these problems as an undivided nation."

Again the president was cheered. His address lasted less than five minutes.

The party immediately departed from the club for the downtown exercises.

Parade Begins.
The speeding flock of cars took the president and his party immediately from the golf club to the Baker street intersection of the Peachtree, where the parade through Atlanta's business section, through eager lanes of thousands, was to begin.

From the point where the parade started, up and down either side of Atlanta's famed thoroughfare, down to Five Points, the sidewalks and as much of the streets as the constabulary would allow were packed with men, women and children—culminating at the Grady monument in a vast throng which almost made progress of the procession impossible.

Mrs. Harding, seated beside him, the president's ride down Peachtree was a succession of smiles and bows. As his car approached each segment of the waiting line of observers, those observers broke into loud cheers and the president responded with a gracious smile and graceful greetings of his hat. Mrs. Harding, at his husband's side, smiled upon the crowd on one side of the slowly-moving car, as the chief executive plainly showed his pleasure at the cordial reception to those who lined the other. Two secret service men were seated in the car, one on each side, careful to see that no one approached nearer than the curbing to the presidential vehicle.

An hour before the president was scheduled to address the people at this central point, a crowd of dimensions seldom seen in Atlanta had thronged the thoroughfare of Peachtree street intersection, waiting. When the president arrived, followed by his party, there was but a short wait until the crowd had been doubled by reinforcements from those who had watched his parade down Peachtree. The crowd that heard, or rather strained its ears in an effort to hear his address, was by far the largest Atlanta has seen in the history of the city. Its behavior and respect to the chief executive marked only by a few unavoidable disturbances on the fringes of the excited throng.

Platform Well Guarded.
The improvised rostrum from which the president delivered his talk was protected by a triple ring of police, militia and secret service men, who had trouble throughout the speech in keeping the zealous throng from pressing forward to the very edge of the platform, which stood in front of Henry W. Grady's monument.

Immediately after he had finished speaking, and the Yaarab band had thrilled the throng with "Dixie," the president got into a waiting motor car and drove to the Georgian palace, where he was met by several ladies to an informal reception at the Atlanta Woman's club.

At the club, Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Harding again parted, to rejoin each other a few minutes later when the president stepped into the Brookline club, where the ladies sang "The Star Spangled Banner" while the president walked in and shook hands with the ladies. He then stepped into the club, where he was met by several ladies to an informal reception at the Atlanta Woman's club.

Three cheers were given by those assembled at the clubhouse, and, accompanied by the first lady of the land, the president, still smiling and having, stepped into the automobile and made the last leg of his busy journey.

At the station, he and Mrs. Harding went immediately down to the special train, which was waiting on the tracks, and stepped aboard, after again expressing to those who had gone to their own homes their appreciation at Atlanta's welcome and their delight at having been able to make the visit.

Line of March.
The parade line of march follows: 1. Mounted police, Chief James L. Bear, commanding.

2. Band, Yaarab temple, commanding.

3. Second battalion, United States national guard of Georgia, Major Charles Cox, commanding.

4. R. O. T. C. unit, Georgia School of Technology, Major A. L. Pond, commanding.

5. Band, Peach High school, P. S. Woodward, leader.

6. R. O. T. C. unit, Tech High school, Major William D. Dore, commanding.

7. Band, Georgia Railway and Power company, D. R. Baldwin, leader.

8. R. O. T. C. unit, Boys' High and Fulton County High schools, Major Frederick W. Dore, commanding.

9. Marietta college cadets, Major E. R. E. Schmitz, commanding.

10. Band, Georgia Military academy, P. J. Major, leader.

11. R. O. T. C. unit, Georgia Military academy, Colonel J. Q. Nash, commanding.

12. The president, Honorable Warren G. Harding, and party, in automobiles.

faces as could crowd within, faces that remained gazing and apparently straining to aid in hearing the words the president was saying. The few trees that remain to this section of downtown Atlanta were using their limbs as resting places for youngsters and for people of ages that made you wonder how they had shinned to the perilous heights they held.

The sidewalks were just as thickly packed as the streets; there was neither room to go backward, go forward, or turn for those who had gotten beyond the faraway fringe of the throng.

One Disturbing Point.
One little section of the crowd, particularly jammed and so situated as to feel the brunt of every motion or attempted motion made in all the thousands, made a bit of disturbance on three occasions that necessitated pauses by the president in his address. The confusion, aided and abetted by the noise made, created such a disturbance that even those on the platform were unable to hear. Governor Harding rose to his feet each time and motioned the crowd to silence, which prevailed for a time. For next Adair also urged those near the center of disturbance to help end it.

W. D. Upshaw, congressman from this district, made his way down from the platform and to the edge of the crowd just where the disturbance arose and, with the assistance of what policemen were available, the secret service, cadets from Georgia Military academy and civilian volunteers, maintained a semblance of order.

25,000 Adair's Estimate.
This particular element of confusion was responsible for the only public estimate on the numbers there. The colossal magnitude of the affair was so astounding that people were timorous of a guess. But this same Forrest Adair, entertainment chairman, arising to the fore to assure the military of the noise-makers, said:

"There are 25,000 people here who want to hear President Harding and welcome his words, and there are only about 15,000 who are making noise."

Make Good Appearance.
The parade brought to Atlanta another view of military in the most impressive organizations that marched in front of the motor-equipped official entourage. But the military in all the line of march was more pleasingly formed or more satisfying to the eye than any other. The Georgia Military academy, they marched in company front and managed to keep almost perfect alignment, a thing practically impossible for a seasoned bunch of camp followers, when narrow city streets are the parade ground.

Not Enough Police.
The brief but lamentable disorders in the throng brought out more than once the opinion that Atlanta's police force is still far from adequate. Those there did their best to maintain order, but there were too many places requiring attention at once.

Makes Fine Impression.
Secretary Weeks, of war—if that new form of designation is permissible—made a profound impression on the throng at the Druid Hills luncheon. Tall, handsome, radiating energy, grayed to the point that demands respect whether or not the possessor commands it, his brief talk made the gathering of Atlanta business men sure the affairs of the war department are in good hands.

The secretary of war also assured Georgia of Camp Benning's permanency. He quoted the opinion of another in the party: "If the delegates to the disarmament conference could see what we saw in the display at Benning Thursday morning—all the nations of the world would vote for total disarmament."

Drawl of Southerner.
The secretary of the interior, former Senator Fall, was another of those who favored the Druid Hills luncheon with remarks and immediately was voted the confidence of all who heard. Vastly different in respect from Secretary Weeks, Secretary Fall has that same stolidity, that same sincerity of purpose. Translated rather in the easy and drawing sureness of a southerner to the manner born than the snap and certainty of the former, however.

Secretary Fall was an appointee to the supreme court bench under Grover Cleveland, and in his remarks likened President Harding to that democratic executive.

Seemingly to feel that he was in a democratic nest, the secretary said: "I didn't leave the democratic party, it left me."

Takes Care of Hat.
President Harding and his secretary, George Christian, came up to expectations of formality in that they wore silk hats. President Harding, however, as he emerged from the terminal station just after noon, was wearing his despite the poppy little drizzle which was falling. Some way, they are always called that you know, sitting on the top of the station's plaza roof, queried the president:

"Why don't you put on your hat?" "Afraid it will get wet," answered the chief executive—these the first public remarks ever addressed by this president to an Atlanta audience.

"Good-by All."
His last words, by the way, as his train pulled out of the Brookwood station at 6:30 Thursday evening, were, "Good-by all."

And he seemed to put the same significance into that "all" that he had put in his pleas for national and complete unification, both in the festive room at Druid Hills and in the hunting-hung space around the Grady monument.

Mrs. Harding's last words were addressed to the group of Atlanta women who had been waiting for the train platform, almost burdened down with the armload of flowers she carried.

"Please let me thank you just once more for the wonderful time you have shown us."

Proving that after all she is a lady, she turned to the ladies, several American women. That's what they all would have said and that's what we all would have wanted them to say.

Barney Was There.
Barney, the huge, dark-complected, smiling guardian of the door at Druid Hills, was a little beyond his customary glory. Never has Barney's ponderous soul—if it fits his body—been so gloriously—been waited so high. He welcomed potentates and yelled for chauffeurs for super-potentates, but his voice has never been so stentorian or impressive as in those gall and wormwood days after the war between the states, when he stood in the north and preached the same good gospel.

And the president realized the significance and spoke high tribute of the southerner whose name has gone into a history as one "who died literally loving a nation into peace."

Harvey Tells of Aid Given Farmers Here
Robert B. Harvey, secretary of the agricultural loan agency of the war finance corporation, addressed the members of the Atlanta chapter of the American institute of banking, at the first of a series of monthly forums, held in the Peacock cafe.

The speaker was introduced by Harry H. Johnson, president, who outlined the progress the chapter has made recently.

In his address Mr. Harvey brought out the efforts being made to relieve business and agricultural conditions, and told how 17 farmers in a county near Fulton had borrowed approximately $20,000.

"Farmers are now able to obtain loans at not over 3 per cent, under new rulings," he said. "Two hundred bankers have come to us during the past two weeks to have the plan explained."

Joe W. Gobeille, of the National Surety company, the next speaker, gave an account of the operations of crooks and expert forgers. Several specific cases were cited by him. There are more secrets in the forgery business than in the Ku Klux Klan, he remarked. The urgent necessity of bankers exercising the greatest care in issuing and honoring drafts and cashier checks, was stressed.

Officers of the chapter are Harry H. Johnson, president; Charles E. Shepard, secretary; Miss Regina Carrigan, treasurer; J. A. Bankston was chairman of the entertainment committee.

One hundred swivel guns were used by the Americans in driving the British from Boston.

Three Men Held.
Macon, Ga., October 27.—(Special.)—Three young men of the Williamson mill district have been placed in Bibb county jail in connection with an investigation of a fire that destroyed the farmhouse and a number of barns on the farm of Q. M. Moore at Griswoldville last Saturday morning. It is understood that another important arrest in the case has been made in Jones county, the prisoner being detained in the Jones county jail at Gray.

New Standards Of Excellence Set By the Fair

Declaring that new standards of excellence were set at the Southeastern fair this year and that the agricultural and live stock exhibits were the most diversified and best ever shown here, President H. U. Hastings, of the Southeastern fair association, Thursday issued his annual report covering various features of the exposition.

While no attendance records were broken this year the fair from many other standpoints was the most successful ever held according to Mr. Hastings. He gives a review of the year's accomplishments and states that the fair this year paid out as much money in premiums for educational exhibits and expenses of Georgia as the legislature appropriated at its recent session for the year's maintenance of the University of Georgia.

Following is his report in part: "Before going into a resume of the outstanding features of the 1921 fair we want to bring to public attention a fact that is really astonishing. The Southeastern fair has been charged by the thinking and informed with being largely an amusement and entertainment enterprise and we have these features in abundance as is necessary in the conduct of such an institution.

"We doubt whether there are a dozen people in the state of Georgia who realize that both in 1920 and again in 1921 the Southeastern fair spent for educational exhibits and maintenance and operation of the University of Georgia as much as the legislature appropriated for the year's maintenance of the University of Georgia.

"Our attendance as a whole was disappointing, the deficiency being largely in what we term 'city attendance.' The attendance of farm folk was very good, and the intent manner in which these farm visitors looked at the exhibits of the Southeastern fair is a credit to the fair and to the state of Georgia.

"The diversified agricultural exhibits, the live stock and the poultry were beyond question the outstanding features of the fair. The volume and quality of the exhibits in these departments was so great that it is difficult to do justice to them in a brief report. The exhibits in all parts of the country as one of the few really great annual fairs and exhibitions of the United States and Canada.

"This about fall down on the part of city attendance this year and the slacking up of city attendance in 1920 was a serious question. Do the generalities of the people of this state know what they are doing? Just as soon as the fair is over, the city attendance is something that must be considered and we expect to bring it to public attention soon. It is a question that will have to be met fairly and squarely and answered unequivocally.

"The Southeastern fair is the greatest single feature of the present one. The Southeastern fair have always believed that the agricultural salvation of the southeast lay in a diversified system of agriculture in which the stock, the pig, the hog and the cattle would play a large part. This is fundamental. Hence the emphasis we have put on the agricultural phases of the Southeastern fair. Two years ago we secured the active co-operation of the Southern Growers' association and the Southern Cattleman's association in staging a national hog and cattle show as a feature of the Southeastern fair this year. This national hog and cattle show now constitutes our live stock department.

"The greatest single feature was the swine show under the superintendence of J. Oscar Mills. It was the largest swine show staged in the United States this year and the second largest ever shown in any year. We have come a long way in hog production in six years. In the 1916 fair a relatively small number of animals shown not over 10 per cent were Georgia bred grown hogs. In the 1921 exhibit, the largest in size and equal in quality to the best, there were over 50 per cent Georgia bred and grown."

Tribute is paid in the statement to the splendid work done by J. Oscar Mills, who handled the swine show. W. S. Smith, superintendent of the cattle department; W. H. White, Jr., of the White Provision company; and J. McCright, head of the poultry department. Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, head of the women's department; Mrs. W. P. Anderson, in plants and flowers; and Miss Annie Maude Mitchell, general superintendent. The "Better Babies" feature under the auspices of the Georgia State Fair, Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr., in charge, was highly successful. Mrs. E. W. More, chairman of the art department, also was given high praise.

Thanks of the association were returned to Scout Executive Shine and the Boy Scouts for their services, and to the Junior Chamber of Commerce for splendid service rendered in promoting attendance. The three daily newspapers were thanked for the publicity given. The report closes with a tribute to the services rendered by R. M. Striplin, secretary.

INQUEST WILL BE HELD OVER BODY OF LEWIS TODAY

An inquest over the body of Arthur C. Lewis, state entomologist, who died last night at his apartment, at 17

West Alexander street, will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning by Coroner Paul Donahoe.

The widow of the state official will be questioned. Attaches of the state department of entomology also will be examined by the coroner's jury. According to Mrs. Lewis, her husband had been in depressed spirits owing to ill health for several months and his continued poor physical condition is said to have been responsible for his taking a dose of cyanide of potassium.

Asks Wife to Give Part of Insurance To Cover Deficits

Augusta, Ga., October 27.—(Special.)—Five years after the Merchants bank opened here, in 1911, E. R. Roseborough, vice president, began his embezzlements, continuing them until a total of $187,000 had been reached, when he killed himself early Thursday morning.

No other official of the bank knew of the shortage even at the time it was decided to place its affairs in the hands of the state banking department, so shrewd had been Roseborough.

The vice president disclosed these facts in the notes he left when he shot himself through the head. One of the communications requested his wife to use only what was absolutely necessary of the $90,000 he left in insurance and to place the remainder in the bank to make up part of his defalcations.

Denied Newspapers. One of Roseborough's notes was to his brother-in-law, Inman Curry; one to W. H. Sherman, an employee of the bank; one to L. L. Motes, a business friend, and two to his wife. The notes were exhibited to the coroner and to the officers of the bank, but were denied to newspapers. It was in the note to Sherman that Roseborough said he was short, he adding that his speculations have been in progress over a period of fifteen years. Roseborough was 45 years of age. The Merchants' bank has been in business about twenty years.

The Merchants' bank officers state that they do not yet know exactly in what manner Roseborough took the money, and will not until an investigation now in progress has been completed. Roseborough's life, so far as his business accounts against B. M. Lewis, former cashier of the Bank of Dublin, Ga., and his investigation is said to have disclosed a shortage of $21,000, which was made good by friends of the bank officials but did not at all satisfy the depositors whose money was tied up and involved in the bank's failure.

A local law firm was asked to take charge of the reorganization of the bank and it secured renewals from other banks and finally announced that all details were in shape for reorganization, except that a small amount of money would have to be supplied by stockholders. This was not forthcoming, and the bank was forced to go through the process of liquidation.

Dixon is a wealthy and influential farmer of the county. Lewis has been in the banking circles of Dublin for many years, and was regarded as an efficient and trustworthy bank official. He remained in Dublin for several weeks following the bank's failure, but recent efforts to locate him have been without success, his present whereabouts being unknown in Dublin.

Asks Wife to Give Part of Insurance To Cover Deficits

Augusta, Ga., October 27.—(Special.)—Five years after the Merchants bank opened here, in 1911, E. R. Roseborough, vice president, began his embezzlements, continuing them until a total of $187,000 had been reached, when he killed himself early Thursday morning.

No other official of the bank knew of the shortage even at the time it was decided to place its affairs in the hands of the state banking department, so shrewd had been Roseborough.

The vice president disclosed these facts in the notes he left when he shot himself through the head. One of the communications requested his wife to use only what was absolutely necessary of the $90,000 he left in insurance and to place the remainder in the bank to make up part of his defalcations.

Denied Newspapers. One of Roseborough's notes was to his brother-in-law, Inman Curry; one to W. H. Sherman, an employee of the bank; one to L. L. Motes, a business friend, and two to his wife. The notes were exhibited to the coroner and to the officers of the bank, but were denied to newspapers. It was in the note to Sherman that Roseborough said he was short, he adding that his speculations have been in progress over a period of fifteen years. Roseborough was 45 years of age. The Merchants' bank has been in business about twenty years.

The Merchants' bank officers state that they do not yet know exactly in what manner Roseborough took the money, and will not until an investigation now in progress has been completed. Roseborough's life, so far as his business accounts against B. M. Lewis, former cashier of the Bank of Dublin, Ga., and his investigation is said to have disclosed a shortage of $21,000, which was made good by friends of the bank officials but did not at all satisfy the depositors whose money was tied up and involved in the bank's failure.

A local law firm was asked to take charge of the reorganization of the bank and it secured renewals from other banks and finally announced that all details were in shape for reorganization, except that a small amount of money would have to be supplied by stockholders. This was not forthcoming, and the bank was forced to go through the process of liquidation.

Dixon is a wealthy and influential farmer of the county. Lewis has been in the banking circles of Dublin for many years, and was regarded as an efficient and trustworthy bank official. He remained in Dublin for several weeks following the bank's failure, but recent efforts to locate him have been without success, his present whereabouts being unknown in Dublin.

Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

TELLS SAFE, SIMPLE WAY TO TREAT AND RELIEVE AT HOME

If you have catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh, or if phlegm flows in your throat and has caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms can be entirely overcome in many instances by the following treatment, which can be easily prepared in your own home at little cost. Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Eucalypti (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it 1 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. An improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing should become easier, the distressing head noises, head-aches, dizziness, dimming of vision, should gradually disappear under the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell, taste, defective hearing and mucous dripping in the back of the throat are other symptoms which suggest the presence of catarrh and which may often be overcome by this efficacious treatment. It is said that nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are caused by catarrh and these must, therefore, be many who whose hearing may be restored by this simple, harmless, home treatment—(adv.)

DAMAGE IN STORM TO REACH $5,000,000

Tampa, Fla., October 27.—Property damage in that section of the Florida peninsula swept Tuesday and Wednesday night by the tropical hurricane is estimated at $5,000,000 by insurance men here who have been analyzing reports reaching Tampa from other sections.

The damage in Tampa is estimated at between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000, but it will be several days before definite figures can be given.

The known damage today amounted to seven and included two at St. Petersburg and five in Tampa and vicinity. It was learned that negro children were electrocuted here in addition to those who were known last night to have perished.

Reports from all sections tell of damage to citrus fruit and vegetables ranging from a loss of from 50 to 60 per cent in the coastal region of Pinellas county, with 50 to 50 per cent in Hillsborough county, down to from 5 to 10 per cent in Orange and Polk counties.

The Gulf and Southern liner, Truxillo, from New Orleans, Monday, weathered the Gulf storm and arrived here today safely. The vessel drifted for several hours with a broken steering gear off Eggmont key. Other vessels arriving today were the P. & O. steamer, Mumbi, from Key West, and the Belgian steamer Astor, from Antwerp.

Deluge Cleared Away.

Tampa has emerged from the hurricane of Tuesday to a point where the big storm bids fair soon to be nothing more than a memory. All storm debris is gone, due to hard work by the city's street cleaning department, street car company's crews and individual workers. All street lights were on full blast and the several "white ways" were as bright as ever.

Street car service was restored in part today and will reach further tomorrow. There was some extension also of light and power for houses and industrial plants. The telephone company restored a great number of telephones to working order. Both telegraph companies set up more wires, so that Tampa now in communication by ordinary means to nearly every point. The long distance telephone lines are still in bad shape.

The Tribune got its first direct Associated Press service tonight since last Monday.

Trains are running in normal fashion to nearly all points in this section of the state. Highways are being cleared of debris.

Will Salvage Ships.

Of the five or six ships which were washed ashore here during the storm only one or two will be lost. An odd sight is a three-masted schooner, the Thomas B. Garland, high and dry on a sandbar. A minesweeper and a steel hulled barge nestled alongside. All three will be salvaged and sent back to sea.

The greater part of the damage was along the southwest coast from Punta Rassa, where the gale struck at a velocity of one hundred miles, to just north of Tarpon Springs. A few miles back from the coast the damage is much less and the path of

Secretary of War Will Inspect U. S. Alabama Property

Secretary of War John W. Weeks, who accompanied President Harding to Atlanta Thursday, left the Harding party here Thursday night and went to Sheffield, Ala., where he will make a personal inspection of the Muscle Shoals power plant and the other government property located on the Tennessee river in that section.

Before leaving Secretary Weeks said he would make a careful inspection of the property with a view toward a consideration of the offer made for its purchase by Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer. He said he would consider also the advisability of permitting the Alabama Power company to use the Sheffield steam plant to develop power to relieve the shortage of power existing in hydro-electric systems in several southern states, including the system owned by the Georgia Railway and Power company.

Because of the lack of rain in the storage basins of the power companies in the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee the secretary has been urged to permit the use of the government steam plant at Sheffield to prevent an electric famine in these states. All of the systems are connected and power developed at Sheffield could be transmitted to the other systems, including that of the Georgia Railway and Power company, by transmission lines.

Recently Harry M. Atkinson, chairman of the board of directors of the Georgia Railway and Power company, called attention to the danger of a shortage in electric power due to the scarcity of rain. He sent telegrams recently to Secretary Weeks urging the utilization of the Sheffield plant in this emergency. Similar telegrams were sent by the Georgia Railroad commission, Senators William J. Harris and Thomas E. Watson have been asked by Mr. Atkinson to urge Secretary Weeks to grant permission for the Alabama Power company to use the Sheffield power plant.

SALVATION DISCUSSED BY "CYCLONE MACK"

In a heart-to-heart talk, "Cyclone Mack" McLendon, noted evangelist, discussed the subject of "Salvation" Thursday night at the Baptist Tabernacle and asked all the people who have come to his meetings in Atlanta to pray for the success of his meetings he will hold soon in North Carolina.

"I'm going back to North Carolina next week and will hold my next meeting at Tarboro," he said. "I want every one of you to put me on your prayer list and every night at 8 o'clock I want you to pray for me, as Mack will be preaching somewhere every night at that hour."

Sunday afternoon Mack will preach on the subject of "Heaven." Tickets for this meeting will be distributed at the remaining meetings and will be sent to various office buildings Saturday. Congressman W. D. Upshaw, who is himself an evangelist, was present at the services Thursday night. Dr. John W. Ham, who has been confined to his home because of illness, was able to reappear for a short time.

Besides, there was a pageant by 3,000 high school girls at Carnegie hall, under the auspices of the Women's Roosevelt Memorial association, and a dinner for boys, scouts, who were told that the great personality of Roosevelt "typifies better than any other man in history the principles of the boy scout movement."

A letter from Mrs. Warren G. Harding, expressing interest in the work of the Women's Roosevelt Memorial association to restore the former president's birthplace was read there.

"May Roosevelt house always be kept as a fitting memorial to that great man," said Mrs. Harding, "a place of pilgrimage sacred and inspiring to the people of our great country," the letter read.

Opinions Differ Sharply On President's Address

Some of Senators, at First Extreme in Criticism of Birmingham Talk, Modify Views.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMAN.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel, Washington, October 21.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—There is a sharp division of opinion among southern members of congress, most of whom are democrats, as to President Harding's Birmingham speech on the negro in politics. Many of them who were at first extreme in their criticism, have, to some extent, modified their views.

of Tennessee. Republicans who, in formal statements, declared their approval of it, included Senators Calder, Spencer, and Willis, of Missouri, and Willis, of Ohio. The democrats declared that the president's remarks on the race question were inopportune, and that his policies would tend toward social equality of the negro with the whites. Senator Watson, of Georgia, said the president's speech was "unfortunate and mischievous."

"We are not going to permit social or political equality of the negro and the president's advocates," he declared.

Senator Willis said: "The president's ringing statement in defense of political and economic equality of individual opportunity with recognition of absolute divergence in things as racial, is as courageous as it is true."

"There is no use in saying 'get into line' with facts," he added. "The president has stated the facts as they are. He has not changed the situation. President Harding's statement of statement and patriotism of purpose."

"The president's speech was unfortunate," said Senator Harrison, "but to have made it in the heart of the south where, in some states, the negro population predominates, was unfortunate in the extreme."

"Place the negro upon political and economic equality with the white man or woman and the friction between the races will be aggravated."

The president is right in that the race question is a national one, but his unfortunate and mischievous utterance on the subject will be depressed by people in every section of the country who believe in the preservation of white civilization."

Watson Also Criticized. Senator Watson, democrat, Georgia, also criticized the president's speech. Mr. Watson said he regretted its delivery by the executive.

"It is an unfortunate thing when the president of the United States, a native-born citizen of such southern states as Georgia and Alabama, finds it necessary to lecture the negro on the treatment of the negro," said Senator Watson.

"The president cannot possibly understand our situation in the south, where the population is almost equally white and black."

"There is no such thing as economic distinction between the races in the south. They get equal treatment from our merchants and from our banks. They have made no complaint of racial discrimination in economic matters."

"If his successor in the white house were to be a black man, he would be like to see his cabinet filled with negroes?"

"We white people of the south consider ourselves the legitimate guardians and defenders of a civilization slowly built up by the ancestors of our fathers. We are not going to permit any social or political equality of the kind the president advocates, because we know that it would mean the destruction of the civilization of our ancestors handed down to us."

RAILROAD STRIKE IS DECLARED OFF

nothing to do but annul our orders for the October 30 walkout.

The first announcement of the executive action was made by Mr. Lee, Rushing to the floor below the main meeting room, where a group of newspaper reporters were congregated, he smilingly shouted:

"The strike is off, boys, but I've only got one copy of the resolution and I'll show that to you tomorrow."

All of the union men were smiling as they came out, and many of them were laughing and shouting at each other down the stairs. To all queries most of them merely replied:

"It's all settled. See you tomorrow."

ORDERS TO GO OUT THIS MORNING.

The code messages calling off the strike, arranged in advance with the union leaders, were sent out tomorrow morning, the union heads said. A code word was sent to each general chairman of the unions, and he will in turn forward the orders to each of the subordinate officials under him.

Union leaders said that the resolution adopted by the labor board announcing that no further wage reduction petitions for any one group of employees would be considered until rules and working conditions for that group had been settled was "decidedly instrumental" in bringing about the action calling off the walkout. They declared that they believed under this resolution it would be months before their pay again could be reduced.

The union resolution immediately was communicated to the labor board and proved particularly gratifying to Walter McMenimen, member of the labor group who was instrumental in bringing about the settlement of the crisis.

Addressed by Hooper. Mr. McMenimen, a personal friend of Mr. Lee's and a former trainman, paved the way for a conference between the labor and union men, particularly those today who were represented by Ben Hooper, member of the public group.

"I am immensely gratified," said Mr. McMenimen, who was informed of the employees' decision.

"It takes a great worry off my mind and I am sure it will be best for all."

Mr. Hooper expressed himself as "glad to death" over the conclusion of the walkout order. "A railroad strike at this time would have been more disastrous than the civil war," he said. "It would have almost certainly resulted in a general strike for everyone."

The decision of the United States labor board on July 1, authorizing the railroads to reduce wages of their employees, an average of 12 per cent, was the event in the series which led up to the orders for a general strike by six unions.

As soon as this decision was rendered, a majority of the rail unions voted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike rather than accept a wage cut, although on some lines, notably the Pennsylvania, there were divisions where groups of workers voted not to strike.

Developed Friction. The taking of the ballot test, however, developed some signs of friction among the unions. N. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said that he had been told by some men when the other unions included in their ballots such questions.

Mr. Lee held that it was illegal to vote on anything but the already authorized wage cut.

Leaders of the big four brotherhoods—trainmen, conductors, engineers and firemen—met in Chicago to decide what action should be taken. On October 10 it was announced formally that a walkout beginning October 30 was being progressively in four distinct movements until virtually every crew in the country would have been authorized.

The Switchmen's Union of North America immediately announced that it would join the big four, while B. M. Jewell, president of the railway employees' department, American Federation of Labor, which is comprised of the shop crafts unions, publicly announced that he "would fight tooth and tongue to avert a walkout by the eleven standard unions."

Board Takes Hand. A few days after the "big five" strike call, the United States labor board stepped into the situation. The three members of its public group who had been summoned to Washington to confer with President Harding, announced their plan to avert the strike—no further reduction of wages and immediate reduction of rates by the roads and acceptance of the July wage decrease by the unions. The Constitution's Weekly Novel

Kleath

BY MADGE MACBETH

(Copyright, 1921 for The Constitution.)

Next Week, "The Heritage of Cain," by Isabel Ostrander, Starting Sunday.

He had not long to wait. Kleath wheeled round the sound of his name and grasped Meadows' hand in a cordial clasp.

"I am glad to see you about again, Tim," he said. "How are you feeling?"

"I may recover, but I'll never be the same," answered the other with an awkward attempt to appear at ease. Then from force of habit he stole a glance at his companion.

Kleath's face was pale and tired-looking. His eyes had that strained appearance one sees in persons who try to bear pain without flinching.

They spoke of casual, inconsequential things until, seated in the little office behind the "hall," Tim said with considerable emotion:

"I want to thank you, Chris, for the courtesy you showed to Goldie. Believe me, when I tell you I appreciate it."

Kleath rose and walked about the small room. "It was nothing," he said, shortly. "The fact that I was called upon to do this, but still still and he acquiesced, robs me of any heroism you good Dawson folk may think I have."

"That isn't the idea at all," argued Meadows, with great earnestness. "Everybody knows what was prepared to do—'an' that's what I'm saying. You know what I mean, Chris, is that nobody knows why Goldie kept her silence?"

"No! No!" cried Kleath. "Of course! Why not? Ain't that your opinion?"

Over Kleath's face a flush of anxiety came, and he frowned and became harsh and cold.

"You speak like that about your own daughter?" he demanded.

"I have a half a mind to thrash you now," Kleath, then, bore Goldie no grudge, no ill will.

"I think I'm better off," he muttered. Kleath got to his feet.

"Will you tell her, he asked, "that nothing is farther from my thoughts?"

"She won't believe me! Oh, I say, Chris," he suggested. "What would I think about telling her your secret?"

Kleath hesitated a moment, then consented. They left the "hall" together, the younger man so preoccupied with his thoughts that he did not see what the older one saw to the "San Domingo."

She walked with her head bowed and she did not see the two men.

Meadows did some rapid thinking and decided to take a walk.

"Chris!" he said, suddenly. "Meeting you drove out of my head the and unions immediately declared that plan impossible. The board then called the union chiefs into a conference at Chicago, the "standard" conference, the eleven "standard" unions, the younger man so preoccupied with his thoughts that he did not see what the older one saw to the "San Domingo."

Nothing developed at this conference and the board then formally announced that it would strike pending the transportation act had been violated in the strike activities.

Led to Final Action. The labor board hearing was held as yesterday, adjourned when the unionists, at the instigation of the board, requested permission to confer with the employers. These conferences led up to the "big five" final action.

On last Saturday, however, six hundred trainmen on the International and Great Northern began a strike. This strike had been authorized previously to the "big four" strike. What the settlement there will be is not yet known.

ARKWRIGHT URGES PUBLIC UTILITIES AID

must show the public that the crowd now in the saddle is not backed by us.

The meeting was presided over by Ivan Allen, president of the association. One of the speakers was the presentation on behalf of the association by Colonel F. J. Paxton of a handsome cigar case to the retiring secretary, W. B. Fitzgerald.

The new secretary, C. H. Hohenstein, then was introduced and spoke briefly of the future work of the association.

Opportunity School. T. L. Stokes, vice president of Dawson-Paxon-Stokes company, told of the "opportunity school" being conducted by the association and of the splendid benefits resulting from it.

Of special interest from a business standpoint was the address of Robert F. Maddox, president of the Atlanta National bank, who spoke on "The General Business Outlook From a Banker's Standpoint."

Mr. Maddox made a very impressive address on business conditions generally, and upon the outlook for the future. He called the attention to crop difficulties and the cotton-growing situation.

More People Needed. "How Public Utilities Touch the Interests of Retail Merchants," was the subject of the address.

"You retail merchants," he said, "want people with money to get to your stores. You want increasing money to have easier access to your stores. That's the business we are in; we are transporting people to your stores."

"From a purely selfish standpoint the retail merchant ought to have more interest in the success of a public utility than even the stockholders. Automobiles can never take the place of street cars. You may say more the individual who comes to your store in an automobile, but you get your great mass vested in your business. What would your annual sales be? Probably $100,000,000 or nearly four times your present sales. If you get 5 per cent on your sales would give you $15,000,000 in the year.

Earnings Are Fixed. "Georgia Railway and Power company has $70,000,000 invested in its business. Our gross sales are $12,000,000, and that's not peculiar to this company. Either the public utility rates are fixed, and that the turnover comes only about every eight years."

"Our rates are fixed by the railroad commission. I don't complain, because, for various reasons, the rates of a public utility ought to be controlled. But I would like to know how you would run your business if somebody told you that you could not charge your own price; that you must first suffer a loss before raising your prices, that the public then would have to be asked about it, and you might get relief in seven or nine months. Why, we can't do anything, without the consent of the commission."

"The commission is influenced by public sentiment, naturally. You merchants are met by men who are already served by us and are interested only in whether they must pay a few more mills or a few more cents for the service. Of necessity the opposition of these men influences the commission. If these men succeed always, expansion is stopped and service becomes limited to those already served. The opportunity to serve new people is lost."

"Somebody ought to be present at these hearings to represent the future, for people who would come here if assured they would be served by the public utility, so that it is vitally essential that proper public sentiment be created so that the industry can expand and meet growing demands."

"I want the merchants, if possible, to be not passive, but a little active in creating sound public sentiment."

Prosperity of Farmers. The importance to the general prosperity of the section of the property of the farmers was stressed in a talk made by Robert F. Maddox, president of the Atlanta National bank. Mr. Maddox declared that the farmer in the south, and particularly in Georgia, is receiving less return for his labor than any other class of workers.

Georgia contains more tenant farmers than any other state, said Mr. Maddox, and the tenant farmer form 66 per cent of the entire number of farmers. He said that in light southern states are more tenant farmers than in all the others in the country.

was the fact that the farming industry in the south has not yet adjusted itself to changed conditions in farming brought about by the advent of the boll weevil. Whereas, Mr. Maddox said, cotton had until the past few years been the money crop of the south, the coming of this pest has necessitated planting of other crops, to replace cotton as a money crop.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the presentation to W. B. Fitzgerald, retiring executive secretary of the association, of a cigar case, as a token of the esteem in which he was held by the members of the association. The presentation speech was made by F. J. Paxton.

"The Future Work of the Association" was the subject of a ten-minute talk by C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary.

During the meeting, Congressman W. D. Upshaw made a short talk in which he said that he stood ready to give aid to his constituents if called upon.

Expansion Is Stopped. "At hearings before the railroad commission we are met by men who are already served by us and are interested only in whether they must pay a few more mills or a few more cents for the service. Of necessity the opposition of these men influences the commission. If these men succeed always, expansion is stopped and service becomes limited to those already served. Enthusiasm Is Pitched High On Campus of Penn State

Entire Student Body
Pledges to Uphold Penn
State Eleven.

Enthusiasm is at a high pitch here over the approaching big intersec-

ional clash with Georgia Tech in New York on Saturday and a regular-season game with Wake Forest was held tonight to show the Penn State eleven that the entire student body is behind them. The game was to defend northern honors from the southern Yellow Jackets. Even the cheerleaders were in the stands, probably in appreciation of their being selected to accompany the band to New York. The Penn State Sixty-five men, the biggest band sent out from State college in years, are expected to be in the New York grounds to strive for honors over the Georgia Tech band. The Penn State football team, too, is in New York. State students will also go to the game to cheer on their team. The team is planning to hike to New York starting at noon tomorrow.

The football squad through their last hard workout before the game this afternoon and will hold their last practice tomorrow morning before the team leaves. The Nittany coach expects a hard game with the Yellow Jackets. He expects to see the pucky Blue and White eleven will play a better game than they did last year. Harvard last week. The linemen in particular have shown much improvement. The coaches of the southerners will be bump and against a much harder defense than McMahon, Bedenk, Bent, Baer and Hills will compose the Penn State line, and they no longer can be counted on to help the Cardinals. They are sure to give good accounts of themselves on Saturday. Captain Snell took a light workout this afternoon, but he is not able to play before next week.

Enough men of the name of Smith joined the American army during the war to make up fifteen regiments. There were Johnsons enough to make up eleven, Browns eight, and there were seven regiments each of Williamses, Joneses and Millers.

Tornado Will Win if Jump Shift Is Allowed, Declares Sanford

In Spite of Mediocre Defense, Tech Has Power, Says Rutgers Mentor.

New York, October 27.—(Special.) "In spite of its comparatively mediocre defense, the Georgia Tech football team should defeat the Penn State eleven," declared Foster Sanford today in a discussion of the styles and relative merits and strength of the rivals which are to meet at the Polo grounds Saturday. The Rutgers team, which is coached by the old Yale star, got a neat beating from Georgia, got down at Atlanta last Saturday, 43 to 14, and to Sanford was afforded a splendid opportunity to dissect the method and strategy of the "Yellow Jacket."

reasons for his resignation. "This paper is proud of Tech, and the legislature's treatment of one of our great institutions should bring a blush of shame to many a high-salaried chair-warmer connected with the financial policy of Georgia. "Dr. Matheson tells you that it is a struggle, each year, to get from the legislature an appropriation sufficient to carry on the splendid work of our School of Technology, and he adds this indictment: "Tech has had to become a modern Lazarus, and beg from Atlanta to New York the crumbs from the rich men's tables which a rich mother had denied. "Departments appropriation. "Georgians think of it, your greatest institution is impoverished by an administration which voted this year, an appropriation of three hundred and fifty thousand dollars to the department of agriculture and its blood-sucking branches. "Where is the 'new broom' we heard so much about last year? "Are campaign promises worth anything? "Did politics impoverish Tech and fatten our traveling department of agriculture? "There is a feeling throughout Georgia that there is 'too much politics' in our agricultural dynasty. "Upon whom does the blame rest? "The United States government severed its connection with the Georgia bureau of markets, alleging 'too much politics' and too little interest in the farmer. "One of Branches. "This Georgia bureau is one of the many branches of our department of agriculture. It is supposed to be run for the people and not as a political machine; but the federal government failed to secure the department of agriculture.

"Dr. K. G. Matheson, who presided over the Georgia School of Technology, Atlanta, for twenty-four years, has resigned, and in his outspoken letter, this great educator takes Georgia into his confidence, making clear the impelling Waste and Lobby. "No co-operation from the state bureau, and, therefore, the farmers of Georgia are deprived of federal aid. "On account of the political activities of the department of agriculture and its branches, the federal government found it impossible to properly function in conjunction with the state's government, thus putting upon Georgia anything but an inspiring indictment. "The legislature gave our department of agriculture $10,000 this year: where goes this big sum of your taxes? "To pay salaries! "Is there a farmer in all Georgia who can say that our farming industry gets the worth of this big appropriation? "Board of Entomology. "One of the branches of the agricultural octopus is the board of entomology, and from the following list of salary-drawers you will see the potential value of our bug board: GEORGIA STATE BOARD OF ENTOMOLOGY

"The boll weevil destroyed thousands and thousands of cotton farms in Georgia this year, and not one weevil was destroyed by our bug-destroying board of entomology. "Farmer Fools Bill. "A chairman, horticulturists, agriculturists, entomologists, assistant entomologists, field agents and general field agents, and a galaxy of superintendents, all casting big salary checks, while the farmer foots the bills and gets nothing for his money. "A farmer writes us that the department of agriculture has been converted into a political machine, dominating both branches of the Georgia legislature. "It has been charged by members of the legislature that the department's lobbyists swarm like bees when our lawmakers are in session. "Why is it necessary for this department to maintain a powerful lobby? "Does a threatened investigation frighten high officialdom? "If nothing to hide, why fear an investigation? "The people of Georgia are asking questions about these matters; they expect answers, not high-sounding and stereotyped agricultural speeches. "Our farmers shoulder the bulk of the expense of state government; they were promised a number of changes; they have realized none. "Their burdens increase, and officials throw a blanket over past promises by telling the people what is to be done in the future. "Somebody is riding for a hard fall, next year. "List of Appropriations. "That our readers may see for themselves the enormous waste of public money by the department of agriculture, I publish the following list of appropriations voted the department by the last legislature: "For salary of commissioner of agriculture 5,000 "For salary of clerk to commissioner of agriculture 2,500 "For maintenance of department of agriculture 15,000 "To carry into effect par. 11, section 2063, vol. 1, of the Code of Ga. of 1910 2,000 "For salary of director of bureau of markets 2,000 "For salary of chemist 2,000 "For maintenance of office and laboratory and employment of assistant chemists 15,500 "For execution of pure food and drug act 10,000 "For salary of state veterinarian 2,500 "For carrying on work of veterinarian 40,000 "For protection of live stock from disease 6,000 "For exterminating cattle

In and Around Decatur

BY COLONEL JEFFERSON SHACKLEFORD MILLS

Safe Blown at Stone Mountain.

Decatur, Ga., October 27.—(Special.)—The Granite Bank, of Stone Mountain, was burglarized sometime Wednesday night by unknown persons, supposed to have been professional bank blowers. Only the vault doors were opened, and about $400 secured, all of which was covered by insurance. The bank's strong box was not entered.

The bank faces on Main street, and the burglars entered by opening the front door with a crowbar and sledge hammer procured from a neighboring blacksmith shop.

The operators then drilled a hole in the vault on the door which carries the flange and pouring in nitroglycerine, blew off the flange, doing no other damage, and causing so little noise that the explosion was not heard by either police or citizens.

No arrests have been made, and there has not been a clue discovered to direct suspicion towards anyone.

J. Steve McCurdy is president of the bank.

City Improvements Progressing.

Activity in the city government plans for the improvement of the Poplar Springs section is shown by the fact that three miles of new water mains have just been completed, and that surveys are being made preparatory to provide all sewers necessary for that portion of the city.

Acting Fire Chief L. B. Milam was rejoicing today in the possession of fourteen hundred feet of new fire hose, which he hopes will never be needed, but which goes a long way in providing for emergencies in outlying sections, such as Poplar Springs. He stated that he hopes to still further augment his supply.

Making a Town on Fair Grounds.

The Decatur old fair grounds, in the rear of the Crippled Children's home, on the South Decatur car line, which were divided into lots and sold about two years ago, is being rapidly converted into an important residential section of the city.

George L. Trimble, superintendent of construction, today reported that three apartments for T. J. Cain were practically completed at 21 Davis street, and that Earl L. Weeks has also completed a six-room bungalow in the same section.

U. D. Bazaar.

Agnes Lee chapter, U. D. C., Mrs. P. H. Jeter president, today gave a bazaar, during which time a restaurant was conducted and every imaginable article of merchandise sold. The success of the undertaking exceeded the most sanguine expectations.

tions, it was stated, and a large amount of money realized.

The bazaar was held in the storeroom of the Decatur Truck company on Sycamore street, and the ladies desire that a postscript be added to this story expressing their deep appreciation of the kindness of the Buick people.

Ready for Strike

Atlantans Glad

It Will Not Come

Leaders of the movement to meet the emergency which was expected to arise in Atlanta if the threatened railroad walkout had materialized on October 30, expressed gratification Thursday night when informed that the union leaders assembled in Chicago had adopted a resolution calling off the proposed strike.

During Thursday, while the strike was imminent, the emergency board's committees were systematically plans for meeting the strike and were in complete readiness for meeting the emergency which would have arisen Sunday and the days following.

Three committee meetings were held Thursday and the general emergency board, under the chairmanship of W. B. Wroth, was slated to meet Friday morning at 11 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce building.

Also, in expectancy of the strike, the annual convention of the Millinery Jobbers' association in Atlanta, slated for November 3, 4 and 5, was indefinitely postponed Thursday.

day, according to a communication received here Thursday afternoon by Ernest L. Rhodes, president of the Ernest L. Rhodes company. It will probably be held according to the original plan now.

The committee on traffic and priority, E. M. Hudson, chairman, met Thursday night at the chamber of commerce and completed its plans for handling the expected emergency traffic in and out of Atlanta.

The result of the committee's discussion was optimistic and all members expressed the opinion that Atlanta would be well prepared.

Thursday morning, the committee on equipment, Wylie West, chairman, and on roads, routes and terminals, W. Tom Winn, met, polished their plans and were certain that Atlanta could well stand the strike siege.

It was the opinion of D. C. Lawhorn, assistant secretary of the chamber of commerce, that the strike was called off because of the preparations for the emergency which the cities of the country had made.

At any rate, there was jubilation among those in charge of strike plans here when they learned that the strike will not take place as had been expected.

HARMONY IS SEEN

FOR ARMS PARLEY

New York, October 27.—The possibility of any serious differences arising between Great Britain and the United States over the Washington conference on limitation of armaments was discounted tonight by Admiral Beatty, first sea lord of the British admiralty, speaking at a dinner given in his honor by the Pilgrim society.

The world will wait and watch with supreme interest the conference's deliberations, Admiral Beatty said, but nowhere will it be watched with more hope than in England. Surely, he added, there never was a graver issue dependent upon the deliberations of men.

Reverting to the relationship between England and the United States, and the part it will play in the conference, Admiral Beatty said the question was not one of bolstering up a "artificial and man-made alliance," but rather a question of keeping awake the common sense which is right and natural between the two nations.

"On every international every instinct binds us together," he said. "Just as members of the same clan, when widely separated, lose touch with one another, and with one another's point of view unless efforts are made to maintain touch between them, so I believe absolutely in the necessity for the closest intercourse between the United States and Great Britain in every sphere of activity."

"It is not to be expected, indeed, it is humbly impossible, that both countries should be in perfect agreement at all times. When differences do arise in international affairs they are called 'incidents' and much can be made of them by those who delight in making mischief and scandal—but if we know one another completely enough, the misunderstanding can be settled in calm."

CONSIDER THESE FACTS BEFORE YOU ROOF

You simply can't find finer roofing material than FLEX-A-TILES. They permanently resist wear and weather and always look attractive. They are decidedly economical, too, yet they measure up to our own rigorous requirements for top quality. That's why we feel so confident in recommending FLEX-A-TILE Asphalt Shingles to you.

Building a Roof Is Different

Careful work on the rest of a building can't make up for a poor job of roofing.

To get a roof that will last, you must have good materials.

Let us show you actual proof of what we mean by roofs that stay roofed. There are lots of buildings right in your own locality that are roofed to stay because our quality roofings have been used.

When may we submit an estimate? You assume no obligation whatever.
